

Telecourses

If you like to watch television, then a Telecourse might just be for you. Telecourses use high-quality television programs that complement the textbook in order to deliver instruction. Mayland Community College provides students with videos for you to watch the class programs. An instructor at Mayland will guide you through the material and test you on what you have learned.

The main advantage to taking a Telecourse is that you can work at your own pace and work whenever you want to do your coursework. The following Telecourse is offered at Mayland Community College this Fall:

ITV stands for the “Interactive Television”

Mayland Community College uses a special network that delivers instruction through two-way Interactive Television. Classes that meet in specially designed state-of-the-art classrooms are joined electronically with classes from other community colleges across the state. Cameras and microphones in multiple locations allow instant communication between the participants.

ITV classes offer a fun and exciting way to learn with students and instructors from around the state. Classes that originate in a Mayland classroom have the instructor in the room with the students while also broadcasting to students at other locations. Likewise, when we are receiving a class that originates from another site, we receive the instruction through the television monitors in the room. The following ITV courses are being offered through Mayland Community College this Fall Semester at the locations listed below:
